

What is Expected of AASECT Certified Sexuality Educators

In order to become an AASECT Certified Sexuality Educator, to Maintain Certification, and to be able to Renew Certification, the member is required as follows –

1. Maintain membership with AASECT in good standing as defined in Article III, Section G of the AASECT Bylaws at www.aasect.org.
2. To adhere to the AASECT Code of Ethics posted at www.AASECT.org.
3. To meet the criteria for AASECT certification and maintain involvement in the field as per renewal criteria for sexuality educators.
4. To respond to and provide full and accurate information about pending or actual actions against any professional credentials related to one's status as an educator (state or voluntary certifications, licenses, etc.) that serves as a partial condition for certification.
5. To respond truthfully, accurately and completely to any and all questions on initial and renewal applications.
6. To stay up-to-date on new developments in the field of sexology and sexuality education.
7. To earn a minimum of 20 AASECT approved Continuing Education credits/hours every five years (the first renewal is after three years).
8. Individuals who wish to supervise candidates for AASECT certification, as Sexuality Educators must meet the criteria as established by AASECT for a professional who will serve as a Sexuality Educator Consultant. When no Educator/Consultant is available in a given area, an approved Certified Sexuality Educator from another area may act as a consultant provided the Educator's certification has been in effect for a minimum of three years, and the Chair of the Certification Committee has approved the Supervision Agreement in advance of commencement of supervision.

Failure to comply with any of the above may result in actions against the member's Certification. The AASECT Board reserves the right to investigate and take actions against the Certified Professional's membership/certification when other complaints (not listed above) are introduced against an AASECT Certified Sexuality Educator.

Falsification of information provided in an application, or any other information related to certification (e.g., continuing education credits earned) shall be grounds for either action against the Certified Professional's membership/certification or report to a professional credentialing board. Inaccuracy will require immediate corrective measures, including possible revocation of certification.

Any person, in good faith, may lodge a complaint with AASECT against a certificate holder, as long as it is in writing, signed, and with an agreement to be contacted by AASECT to provide any necessary clarification or supporting documentation available.

A complaint may allege that a certificate holder has violated either the requirements for certification or the Code of Ethics of AASECT or the Bylaws.

Any complaint will be reviewed by AASECT for substance. The name of the member shall be known only to the Directors or other appropriate body designated by the AASECT Board or Executive Committee. AASECT will make an educational advisory regarding any ethical or practice issues or Bylaw violations regarding the case, which shall be shared with the Member. The Member will be required to read and respond to the advisory giving assurance that it was understood, and that the Member will only practice in accordance with its recommendations.

The Board of Directors may also consider action against a certificate holder if it learns in any manner (e.g., national clearinghouse) about an action against the certificate holder's license. The Board may take action against a certificate holder who has received an educational advisory from AASECT if AASECT later learns that problematic practices identified therein persist.

If the Board of Directors decides to pursue a complaint, both the certificate holder and the relevant credentialing organization shall be contacted to ascertain, in writing, if any action is pending or has been taken.

If action is pending before a relevant credentialing organization or licensing board or other similar body, the Board of Directors may choose to await the decision of the licensing board or other agency of authority before considering further action. The relevant body and/or the certificate holder shall be contacted on a reasonably regular basis to determine the status of the case.

If action is taken against a license or before a relevant credentialing board, the Board of Directors shall consider parallel action. A revocation of license or equivalent credentials should result in an automatic revocation of a certificate (and possibly AASECT membership as well). A suspension of license or equivalent credentials should result in a suspension of a certificate. Depending on the sanctions imposed by the licensing board or similar authority, the Board of Directors may impose additional requirements for reinstatement if deemed appropriate (e.g., education, supervision).

If a serious complaint is lodged against a certified educator or a flagrant violation is reported, the member's certification status is considered "Pending" until the time the inquiry or complaint is satisfactorily resolved, or there is a 2/3 vote by the Board of Directors to utilize the Pending status. This constitutes a limited abridgment of good standing in AASECT.

A Pending status implies that the member may not renew any certification within AASECT until the status is resolved. The Pending status will prohibit the member from running for AASECT elected or appointed positions, or from displaying the AASECT Sexuality Educator certification, or having referrals made by AASECT to the Pending status Educator until the status is resolved. AASECT Office will maintain a list of all certificate holders who are assigned Pending status.

The Pending status has no authority to prevent the member from practicing as an educator in his/her licensed state or for practicing another profession which AASECT does not certify.

Confidentiality of the member is respected and only the Board of Directors is aware of the circumstances surrounding the Pending status. The responsibility for resolving the Pending status rests on the member.

If action against a certificate holder's license is neither pending nor has been taken, the Board of Directors may choose to initiate a complaint to a licensing board or another professional credentialing organization based on direct evidence at its disposal. (It should be noted here that most if not all states grant immunity from liability to anyone participating in a Board case in good faith.)

If conditions warrant (such as, failure to meet CE requirements or falsification of CE information), the Board of Directors may choose to take action against a certificate holder whether or not action has been taken against his or her license or equivalent credentials. Such actions could include probation with conditions for reinstatement (e.g., education, supervision), suspension, or revocation. A 2/3 vote by the Board is required in order to revoke membership in AASECT.

The AASECT website and other appropriate documents state clearly what conditions are expected of a certificate holder to earn or retain said certificate, and what procedures may be followed if a client/patient or other individual feels that the standards of AASECT may have been violated. Procedures described could include the possibility of lodging complaints with AASECT and/or the relevant licensing board or other professional credentialing organization.
